NEW POPE: FALSE SIGNALS

Radio tells of election, bells sounded in error AS CARDINALS FAIL TO PICK PONTIFF

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 26, (Reuter): THE CARDINALS of the Roman Catholic Church meeting in secret conclave, failed after four ballots today to elect a new Pope, but false smoke signals twice caused official announcements of a successful election.

On Canada's immigration policy toward West Indians he said the West Indies must settle domestic immigration problems before seeking easier admission to Canada.

POSTAL DELAYS TO BE PROBED

A COMMITTEE has been appointed by the Hon. A. G. S. Combs, Minister of Communications and Works, to investigate delays in the delivery of postal articles and telegrams.

In appointing the Committee, of which the Hon. A. G. S. Combs is Chairman, the Minister said the decision was made as a result of letters and articles in the Press complaining of delay in delivery of telegrams and parcels.

It was further decided that the public should be given an opportunity in the form of group representation to express complaints to study the reasons for delay in many instances, and, if possible, to suggest ways of avoiding these delays and improving delivery services.

With this aim the Jamaica Chamber of Commerce, the Association of Local Government Authorities of Jamaica, the Kingston and St. Andrew Taxpayers and Ratepayers Association, the Customs Brokers Association and the Jamaica Tourist Board were appointed to a committee to deal with the situation.

The chairman, the Committee will consist of 7 members nominated by various bodies as follows: W. E. Meeks of the Jamaica Chamber of Commerce, Mr. W. Benjamin of the Association of Local Government Authorities of Jamaica, Mr. H. Earl Johnson of the Kingston and St. Andrew Taxpayers and Ratepayers Association, Mr. Ivor T. Robertson of the Customs Brokers Association, Mr. Roy Bentley of the Jamaica Tourist Board and Mr. E. K. Egan, Acting Chief Inspector representing the Collector General's Department.

After both morning and afternoon ballots the Sistine Chapel chimney belched white smoke—the signal for a successful election—then the signal changed to black.

On each occasion, the announcer of the official Vatican Radio like watching thousands were misled and proclaimed the election of a Pope. On each occasion too they were forced to admit their error.

The second smoke signal of the day meant that no candidate had yet attained the required majority of at least 34—two-thirds plus one of the cardinals present—and voting was suspended till tomorrow morning.

After the two morning ballots, when the initial signal was white, Vatican Radio's announcer declared: "It's white, it's white." It is the most exciting moment in the election of the new Pontiff has been elected of the first ballot.

The crowds in St. Peter's Square began to cheer. Then the white clouds turned black and black smoke, unmistakable against the clear blue sky, belched out.

The same happened in the evening—only this time the smoke signal was not clearly visible against the dusk sky and Vatican Radio stood firm on "white smoke" for nearly half an hour before announcing that a new Pope had not been elected.

Simultaneously the searchlight illuminating the Sistine Chapel chandelier apparently switched from inside the conclave area was switched off.

The Vatican announcer said: "This is undoubtedly a most important sign. We must conclude that the election has not taken place."

The Vatican transmission was then abruptly terminated.

The speaker, the famous Vatican broadcaster, Father Francesco Pellegrino, had insisted almost to the end of the transmission that the white smoke signal had been given and that the announcement would shortly be made of the name of the new Pope.

Churches all over Italy had begun to sound their bells in belief that a new Pope had been elected.

Inside the Conclave Area, the 51 cardinals, presumably all cardinals of the conclave outside, were thought to be spending the evening in private consultations.

After another night in their austere "cells" the Cardinals will begin balloting again tomorrow morning.

With this aim the Jamaica Chamber of Commerce, the Association of Local Government Authorities of Jamaica, the Kingston and St. Andrew Taxpayers and Ratepayers Association, the Customs Brokers Association and the Jamaica Tourist Board were appointed to a committee to deal with the situation.

Britannia flights to S. America start today

LONDON, Oct. 26 (Reuter): THE first jet-prop airline service between Europe and the Caribbean and South America starts tomorrow when British Overseas Airways begin twice-weekly Britannia flights between London and Caracas.

It will also be the first direct passenger air service between Britain and South America. The Britannias will carry 34 first class and 39 tourist passengers.

One service a week will fly London-Bermuda-Port of Spain-Caracas in a total time of 21 hours 25 minutes.

The other service will make an extra call at Barbados and take 22 hours 40 minutes. Journey times from Caracas to London on the same routes will be 13 hours 55 minutes and 19 hours 15 minutes.

The service was originally planned for October 16, but was postponed because of the recent strike of engineers at London Airport.

B.O.A.C. gave up its South American routes in 1948, but its subsidiary, British West Indian Airways, connected with B.O.A.C. flights between the West Indies and Britain.

The editorial says: "Almost certainly the proudest day in the life of Mr. Marryshow was April 22, 1952, when he attended the opening of the official opening in Port of Spain of the first Parliament of the Federated West Indies. It was an event which changed a long life whose central theme had been work for the betterment of conditions not only of his fellow Grenadians, but for all West Indians."

The GUARDIAN writes that Mr. Marryshow once said: "Set your aims high no matter how poor you may be. You can achieve great things if you place an object in view and stick to it."

The editorial goes on that the objects which Senator Marryshow kept constantly in view were representative Government, Federation and ultimately Dominion status for the West Indies. The first to be lived for was probably not far away.

"It must be a consolation to the West Indians, however, that Senator Marryshow has shown by his example that great things, however difficult they may appear, can be achieved by resolution and perseverance," the Guardian concludes.

emotional hostility in the terms of the lease themselves. Dr. Williams, however, scathingly observed to reporters that "several persons in Trinidad must have known the whereabouts of the lease," and the fact that they showed no inclination to assist the Government to unearth it proved that certain of them who had financial interest in maintaining the status quo were prepared to put their "material interests above the vital interests of this territory."

U.S. Congressional elections... Democrat victory predicted

U.S. Congressional elections... Democrat victory predicted

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26: (Reuter): PRESIDENT EISENHOWER sets out from here tomorrow for another speaking tour in an attempt to stop what some of the latest public opinion polls predict will be a landslide victory for the Democrats in the Congressional Elections on November 4.

The President returned from a 6,000-mile trip to California and the Middle West last Thursday and is now winding up his campaign activities with a flying visit to key areas in the East, including Charleston, West Virginia, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and New York.

He is expected to make a final appeal to the voters on behalf of Republican candidates in a coast-to-coast radio and television speech towards the end of the week.

Despite the President's strenuous attempt last week to blunt the Democratic drive most political observers say the Democrats are certain to increase the margin by which they control Congress.

Offended In California, there were reports from impartial observers that the President's attempt to picture the Democrats as radicals and irresponsible spendthrifts might have offended many independent voters and Democrats whose support he was seeking.

Although the tide is reported to be running strongly in favour of the Democrats in other key areas, there are no signs that the party is over-confident.

The Democrats are stepping up their campaign efforts with such issues as dissatisfaction in the Middle West farm belt and over foreign and economic policies and the leadership of the Eisenhower administration in general.

BRIDAL GOWNS "A penny for your thoughts," Mr. Simpson.

Import benefits In an hour-long exposition of his Government's attitude to trade with the best authorities with local business, the Chief Minister dealt upon the import benefits which the Americans had gained over the past years, and the wide range of goods that were disposed of to private persons here when the base was deactivated. He insisted that the Government investigation into these trading activities would be continued for some unspecified time, but until those probes were completed the Government did not intend to give permission under its authority for exchange control for any kind of trade between Trinidad and such authorities.

Dr. Williams said the Trinidad Government had made direct arrangements with the United States Consul General for cold storage facilities to be put at the disposal of the Government free of charge, and these facilities would in turn be let to businessmen to store refrigerated supplies for the Christmas season.
